Dear Friends,

Looking back at any year at Second Helpings is always rewarding. Each year we can celebrate hundreds of thousands of meals served, more than a million pounds of food kept out of landfills, and dozens of culinary job training graduates and their families working toward a more promising future.

This year was different. Our challenges included an ever-growing waiting list for our hunger relief program, a test to put the abundance of food from Super Bowl XLVI to good use, the need to build capacity responsibly and still meet our commitments to partner agencies and the promise to help our graduates build meaningful careers in a tough economy.

What makes Second Helpings food rescue, hunger relief and job training programs successful is the unique way that our community comes together to make them work. Volunteers, food donors, businesses, faith-based groups, individual donors and many others transform lives throughout our community each day. Together we make sure that every pound of food, every dollar and every volunteer hour is used to fight hunger and poverty throughout Greater Indianapolis. Yes, we rose to many challenges this year, and like everything else we do, we did it together.

With thanks,

Jerry Adams
Board Chair

Chief Executive Officer

Hunger Relief Expansion

It was a huge task but it needed to be done. The Hunger Relief program created as many as 3,000 meals per day but faced a waiting list of as many as 5,000 meals per week from agencies that needed our help.

There was a solution. It was the dream of Scott Reitano of Foodservice Solutions Group to retool our kitchen and add high density storage to expand the capacity of our hunger relief operation. Scott donated the time and talent of his entire organization to bring the idea to fruition.

Thanks to the United Way of Central Indiana, the Glick Fund and many other supporters, the kitchen shut down in December 2011 for a $1 million dollar expansion project to double production capacity without adding a single square foot to the building. And it all completed in a mere 6-week's time.

Just because the kitchen shut down didn't mean that anyone missed a meal. Our entire hunger relief operation moved to Barto's Catering and Concession facility at the Indiana State Fairgrounds, and with the help of Gleaners and other community partners, our staff and volunteers were hard at work — creating and delivering nutritious meals and ensuring that none of our partner agencies were adversely affected during construction.

By late January 2012, the expanded Hunger Relief Kitchen at Second Helpings was in operation, with expanded food storage and cooking capacity, improved water and energy efficiency, and enhancements to improve the reliability and flexibility of our food rescue and delivery fleet. Second Helpings now had the physical capacity to prepare up to 6,000 meals per day for hungry children, seniors and families in Central Indiana.

Almost immediately, the staff and volunteers began working to help those on our waiting list. Among them, the Boys and Girls Clubs of Indianapolis, where Second Helpings could now provide kids around our city a hot meal so that they had the basic nutrition they needed to focus on homework and succeed in school.

Super Bowl XLVI

When the NFL came to Indianapolis, they arrived ready to build a food rescue program to make sure that the excess food from Super Bowl events didn't go to waste. But when the NFL came to Indianapolis, they arrived to find Second Helpings was already in place and ready to do everything they needed and more.

As the Official Food Recovery Partner of Super Bowl XLVI, Second Helpings staff and volunteers rescued 46,000 pounds of food from parties and other events around the city. Our neighbors who rely on our partner agencies for their most basic needs enjoyed the abundance of the Super Bowl celebration with unusual treats including prime rib, shrimp and elegant desserts. Football and Super Bowl themed cookies were dispatched to our partners who serve children throughout our community. Through those meals, families and children who otherwise may not have been able to participate in the festivities still shared in the celebration.

At the same time, the students of Class 66 had unprecedented experiences. They worked side by side with executive chefs from across the country, learning new techniques and presentations and encountering ingredients like edible flowers, caviar and frogs' legs that aren't normally part of their curriculum. "Super Class 66" as they dubbed themselves, stepped up to every challenge and every opportunity that the Super Bowl had to offer.

On the Move

Logging over 10,000 deliveries each year, the reliability of Second Helpings' fleet is critical to our ability to provide hundreds of thousands of meals to children, seniors and families in Central Indiana.

In November 2011, The Rotary Foundation purchased a new van for Second Helpings that significantly helped ramp up meal deliveries to partner agencies. This was the first-ever brand new vehicle in Second Helpings' food rescue fleet and throughout the summer months, Second Helpings volunteers took this van to farmers' markets around Indianapolis to rescue more fresh, nutritious produce.

Kroger Food Stores is always a generous supporter to Second Helpings. In April 2012, Second Helpings welcomed a new refrigerated box truck into its fleet. Kroger Food Stores provided this truck which now travels all over Central Indiana. This vehicle offered greater reliability making it possible for Second Helpings to rescue over 1.8 Million pounds of food from Kroger Stores and over 100 other food donors last year.
